OPPOSITION TO SALOONS

More-Trouble in Store for the Local Liquor Men.

MANY LETTERS RECEIVED

Indications are That a Number of Oitizens Will Appear Before the Hustings Court to Oppose Granting Licenses.

on account of the enactment of the Mann revenue bill, and the action of the City Committee in increasing the li he worst is yet to come. For when cents for a renewal of their licenses they ounter a stumbling block in the shape of a determined effort to have many of the applicants refused.

The liquor men are aware that a movement is on foot to fight them in the Hustings Court, and while every tub will have to stand on its own bottom, the objections being made against individual merchants and not the traffic as a wilole, the dealers may unite in their efforts to defeat the outlined plan of the opposition slement.

the dealers may utilize in defeat the outlined plan of the opposition element.

BACK THEM UP.

Since the finding of the Council Finance Committee on the license system first became public property, and the whiskey men undertook to have the result set aside by the Common Council, there has developed among what may be regarded as a conservative element of the citizens and offer every assistance within their power. This was demonstrated at the recent meeting of the Common Council, when seventy-five members of the Citizens. Union were present to lend what moral courage they could to the Councimen in the anticipated battle, which never really materialized.

Since the agitation first commenced, Commonwealth's Attorney Richardson has received innumerable letters from prominent citizens, asking that they be notified when the Hustings Court will pass upon applications for license renewals. They have determined to not only sustain the Council, but to drive out of business, if possible, all objectionable salconists.

It is impossible at this time to state just when the salcon license hearing will be undertaken by the Hustings Court, but it will not come up before the May term of court, not later than the 16th. Then every application will be considered by the presiding judge, and those persons who are opposed to having this or that license granted will be given an apportunity to protest. If the court believes the complaint of sufficient strongth and based upon facts it will decline to issue the necessary permit.

REQUIRES THREE.

Under the law it requires three citizens in oppose the granting of a license, but the same three gentlemen may appose the issuance of a permit to every saloon in the city, regardlesses of its locality or proximity to their homes or places of business. Commonwealth's Attorney Richardson has received a savarances from many more than enough citizens to insure figuor question this year than feed about the matter. Just what this will lead to is preblematical, and it is impossible to foretell what the outcome will be. The latity of the clitzens about the saloon problem is on the wane."

THE PROCEDURE.

Mr. Richardson explained that in order for a person to secure a liconse renewal he must deposit with the given amount with the Commissioner of Rovenne, who will furnish a receipt for the same. This paper is then carried to the Hustings Court, and the advisability of granting a license to the party in question considered in open court. In event the judge passed favorably upon the application, the incident is closed for a year, and the saloon will continue in business. But If the application is adversely considered, the money is refunded by the Commissioner of the Revenue, and the saloon is closed forthwith.

The Finance Committee will meet next Monday night, when the individual applications for a reduction in the license tax of those saloons who think they have been rated too high will be considered. It will require two or three sessions to conclude the matter, and the final report will not be formulated or made public until the next regular meeting of the Common Council.

Churchman Says it is a Religious Paper: Can't Print Acrimonious Letters.

The Southern Churchman, of this city, finds it necessary to remind some of its readers that it is a religious paper and that "in all things charity" is its invariable and unalterable rule,

Mention has been made before of the brisk discussion of the proposed change in the name of the Episcopal Church. The Churchman has been the center or medium for the discussion in this section and it contains this week, in addition to an editorial, a long article from Dr. John H. Elliott, of Washington, on the origin of the title "Protestant Episcopal." But

H. Elliett, of Washington, on the origin of the title "Protestant Episcopal." But some of the correspondents it would seem have not been altogether conservative in their communications with the editor of the Churchman. At all events the following is a portion of an editorial this week under the caption "Letters to the Editor."

"And in the second place, just now many communications are appearing as to change of name; in this and in all connections correspondents must avoid personalities and bitter or unkind attacks on those holding other views. A man's motives are his own, and known only to him and his God, and they must be respected in controversy, so far as this paper is concerned. We make no such attacks, and we cannot allow them to be made in these columns. This statement may also explain to some of our correspondents why their communications have not been published.

Before all things cles the Southern Churchman is a religious paper, and anything contrary to this standard appearing in its columns may be assumed to be the result of an oversight.

"In all things charity is our invariable and unalterable rule."
